

Sonoma Index-Tribune

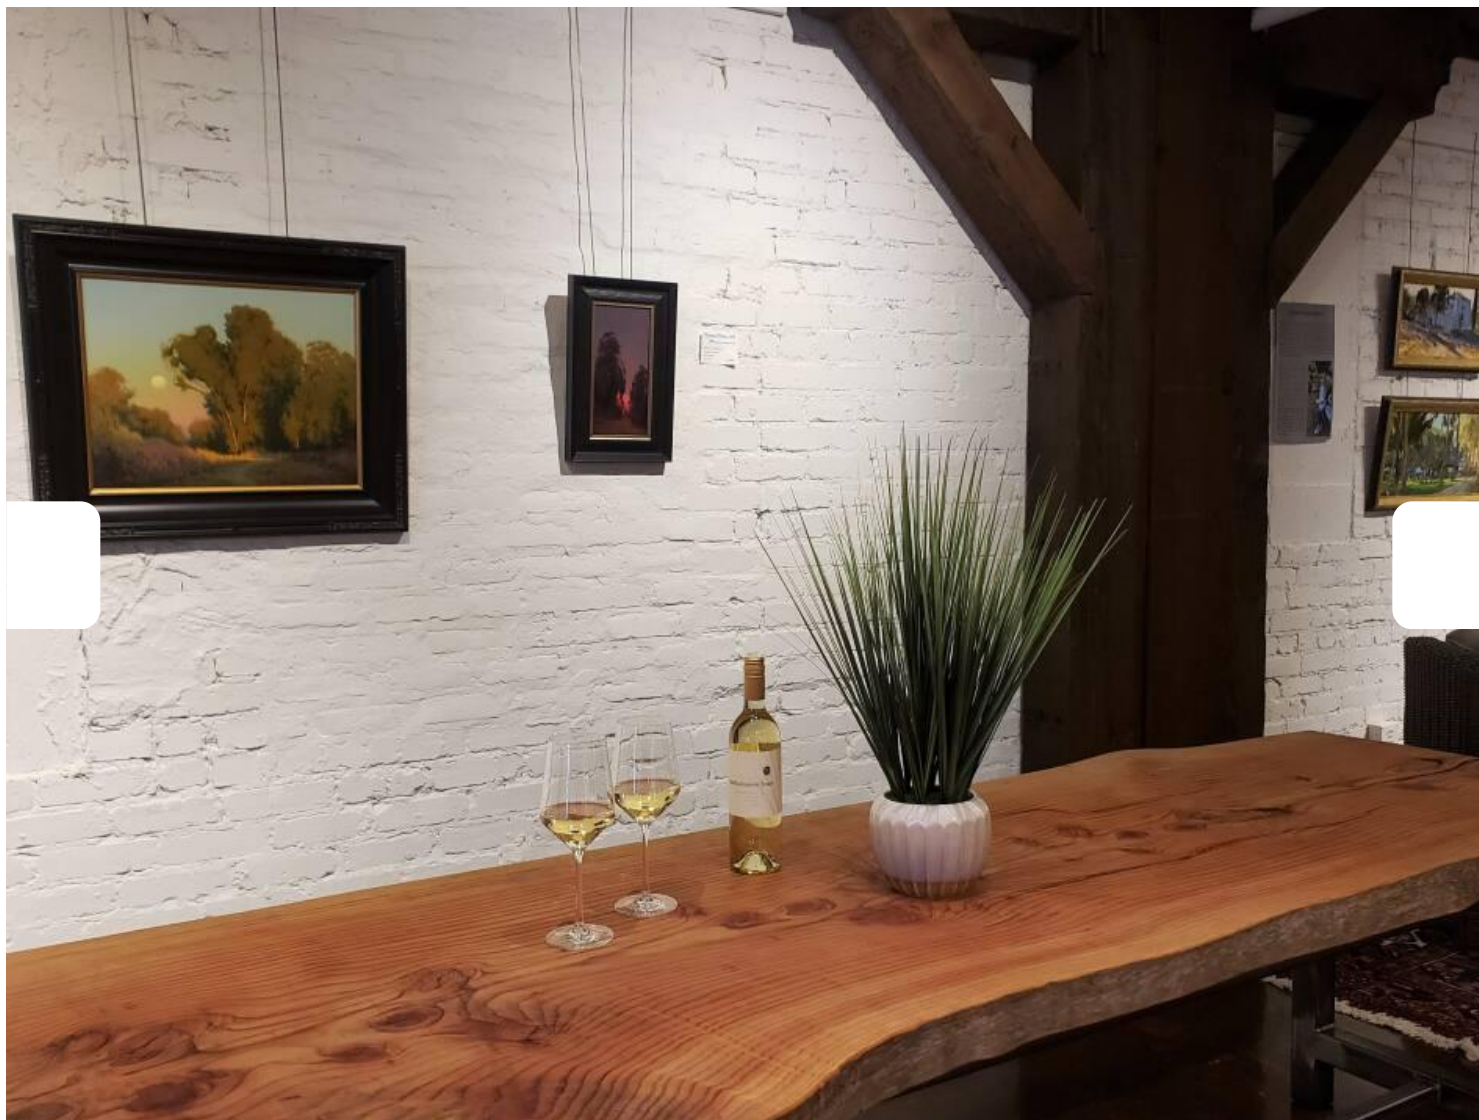

News Business Opinion Education Entertainment Lifestyle Sports Obits

Search...

Subscribe

Plein air art gallery opens at Bart Park winery

SLIDE 1 OF 3

The Plein Air gallery inside Sonoma's Bartholomew Estate Winery. (Photo by Michelle Hogan).

LORNA SHERIDAN
INDEX-TRIBUNE MANAGING EDITOR

April 22, 2021

Bartholomew Estate Winery has reopened its art gallery with a permanent exhibit of artists who take part in the Sonoma Plein Air festival. The gallery is located within the property's historic Mission-style winery building.

"We are delighted to be back open and to donate this space to the Sonoma Plein Air Foundation to share their wonderful rotating exhibit of works by their artists. It supports our mission of giving back to the community," said Anna Pope, winery co-owner and trustee of the Frank H. Bartholomew Foundation, which owns and operates the nonprofit Bartholomew Park, in the announcement of the reopening.

Sonoma Plein Air donates 25 percent of its proceeds from art sales to support art education in local schools and community organizations.

Private viewing sessions at Bartholomew Estate, for up to six people per group, are free of charge and available by reservation on the half-hour from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesdays through Sundays. Make appointments at bartestate.com/visit.

RELATED STORIES

New winery opens April 27 in Sonoma's Bartholomew Park

Bartholomew Estate Winery opened its doors in April of 2019 as a new winery in the heart of the 375-acre Bartholomew Park in Sonoma. Bartholomew Estate was formed by Pope and winemaker Kevin Holt, to honor the legacy of Frank and Antonia Bartholomew. 1000 Vineyard Lane in Sonoma.

BREAKING NEWS ALERTS

Receive immediate notice of breaking news events.

Read our Privacy Policy

MOST POPULAR

1 2346

Valley Forum: Mayor bids farewell to the kind, decent people of Sonoma

Sonoma mayor to step down to pursue 'significant career opportunity'

Lengthy Highway 12 resurfacing project in Sonoma begins May 19

Priscilla Essert to step down

Tuesday farmers market

Prescribed burn planned for